Reply Comments re. National Security Threats NPRM:

Last week was the deadline for submitting reply comments on the FCC’s Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (“NPRM”) on Protecting Against National Security Threats to the Communications Supply Chain Through FCC Programs (see FCC 18-42 and our newsletter of April 2nd). Initial comments filed by the State E-Rate Coordinators’ Alliance (“SECA”) and the American Library Association (“ALA”) both urged the FCC to base compliance with any resulting E-rate rules on service provider assurances and certifications.. Additional support for this position was provided in the reply comments filed by Kellogg & Sovereign Consulting (“KSLLC”).

Most of the other reply comments — none taking issue with the SECA/ALA position — were filed by national or regional telecommunications associations concerned primarily with FCC authority and with the preeminence of Congressional and other federal agencies (e.g., the Departments of Commerce, Homeland Security, or Defense and the National Security Agency). Several rural broadband and wireless associations warned the FCC about the detrimental impact of banning affordable equipment currently being provided by Chinese companies. Copies of all reply comments are available in the FCC’s Electronic Comment Filing System under the proceeding designated “18-89.”
